

Speakers

Speakers are often unpaid and busy people. It is well worth asking them months in advance of the event to avoid disappointment. Often speakers will ask for no payment for their services but it is always nice to offer travel expenses and/or to offer to make a collection towards their good cause.

Speakers will often be happy to come along to speak to small groups – but if they have a long way to travel it is worth informing them at the time of booking that only half a dozen people might be there. This will help them plan their programme and calculate the numbers of any hand-outs.
